PROCTORS

We change expectations about how the Arts can serve a community. By creating partnerships with our neighbors and community members, we connect the Arts to the lives of our patrons and friends and move our mission forward.

For almost 100 years, Proctors has been a staple of downtown Schenectady, helping drive the social and economic engine in the Electric City.

Kristyn Youngblood and Danyel Fulton in Petticoats of Steel

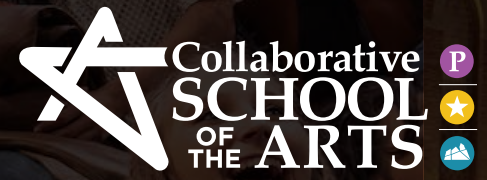

theREP★

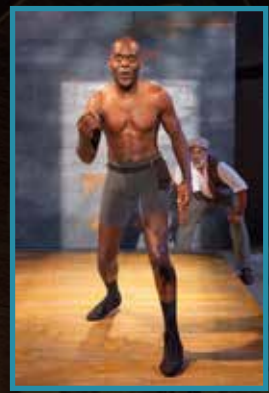

We bring stories to life and unleash ideas to the world. Our productions serve as a catalyst for our communities and foster the belief that theatre must serve as an advocate of the common threads that bind the American culture together.

In its state-of-the-art home at 251 N. Pearl Street in Albany, theREP will continue its tradition of new play development for both seasoned playwrights and the next generation of writers bringing stories to life on stage.

The Collaborative School of the Arts brings together students from across the Capital Region to show them the power of the Arts. From the Young Playwrights at theREP, to Rock Camp at UPH, to the Acting Academy at Proctors and so much more, the Collaborative School of the Arts is dedicated to helping grow the cultural and technical skills of the Region's young people. With scholarship opportunities that guarantee everyone can take part, regardless of financial circumstances, the School of the Arts is a vital part of our mission.

Thomas Silecut in the Rosyie

We are dreamers, artists, educators, innovators and leaders. Our members allow us to bring diverse talent to our stage so we may show our audiences the power and impact of the Arts.

An architectural gem in the heart of downtown Saratoga Springs, UPH came roaring to life in 2020 with a wide range of performers in our 700-seat theatre in the round.

WE AMPLIFY THE ARTS AS A CATALYST FOR GOOD IN THE COMMUNITY...

AND YOUR SUPPORT DRIVES THAT MISSION FORWARD...
